The two oldest sons, Chauncey and Rodney, took up land six miles north of where the State House now stands, their farms adjoining.

The country at that time was densely wooded through which roamed the Indians and wild beasts.

On one occasion the mother of our subject [H. C. Cooke] saw a large black bear devouring a pig near her cabin.

The brothers both erected houses out of round, unhewn logs with puncheon floors and primitive fireplaces with mud-and-stick chimneys.

They lived in true pioneer style while clearing their land and transforming it into productive fields.

At first their field products were light, but the trusty rifle supplied the deficiency, Rodney Cooke being a good marksman.

In course of time the land became highly cultivated, and upon the farms which they developed the brothers spent the remainder of their lives.

They were energetic and enterprising men, and one of the first grist and saw mills in the County was constructed by them on the Olentangy about 1827, now known as the Weisheimer Mill.

They also operated a distillery, which though erected later than the mill, was one of the first in the County.

Rodney Cooke, who was the father of our subject [H.C. Cooke], was born in Wallingford Connecticut in 1793, and was married to Laura Cowles.

He became prominent in public affairs and during militia days served as Colonel of a regiment.

He also participated in the war of 1812.

He died in 1833, and his widow, who long survived him, passed away at the age of seventy-three years.

Having learned the tailor's trade in Connecticut, she managed to support her children after her husband's death keeping her family together until they were able to care for themselves.

The youngest child was born three months after the father's death.

H.C. COOKE

Prominent among the business men of Franklin County is numbered H.C. Cooke whose connection with various enterprises and industries have been of decided advantage to this section of the state, promoting its material welfare in no uncertain manner. In business affairs ~~he~~ he is energetic, prompt and notably reliable, and generally carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

Mr. Cooke is not only a representative of one of the honored pioneer families of this County but also comes of good old colonial stock.

A native of this County H.C. Cooke was born near Olentangy Park, March 14, 1825, and his early days were spent in a way common with pioneer boys.

He attended the subscription schools conducted in the primitive log school house, and later spent several terms at the old Otterbein seminary in Westerville, Ohio, thus becoming well fitted for life's responsible duties.

He was early inured to the arduous task of clearing the wild land and doing other hard work upon a new farm.

He followed teaching for some time, his first school being in what is now named Columbus, where he received ten dollars per month; his second being at the Harbor, then called Rogue's Harbor.

In his home district he taught for several terms

Mr. Cooke was married, May 20, 1855 to Miss Abigail A. Taylor who died suddenly May 7, 1893, at the age of sixty-three years.

To them were born seven children, namely:

Clara, wife of Wellington Webster, of Finsley, Ohio;

Flora, wife of J. L. Armstrong, of Clinton township, this county;

Albert Clement, of Columbus, who married Lulu Brown;

Edwin A., who married Ella Haines;

Mary E, deceased wife of David Maize;

Alice A., wife of Charles Hess, of Clinton Township; and Harry Lester, deceased.

After his marriage Mr. Cooke located on the old homestead farm in Clinton township, and as his means permitted he purchased the interests of the other heirs in the place.

Eventually all of the Cooke land entered from the government came into his possession, and he now owns three hundred acres of good land, mostly under cultivation and highly improved.

In addition to his farming interests Mr. Cooke has been identified with other enterprises, the chief among which has been the stock business, probably handling a larger amount of stock than any other shipper in Franklin County.

About eighteen years ago he abandoned that business, and since then has been connected with A. G. Grant, under the firm name of Cooke, Grant + Cooke, as contractors in the construction of heavy masonry for railroad bridges etc. in which undertaking he has met with success.

The business is now managed by his son, A. C. Cooke.

He was one of the promoters of the Worthington + Columbus street-car line, and served as treasurer of the Company.

Always active and energetic, he has undoubtedly successfully handled more lines of business than any other man in Franklin county, and is deserving of prominent mention among the leading and representative citizens of this section of the state.

Politically he has always been a staunch supporter of the Republican party, and in religious belief is a Universalist.

He purchased a farm on the rich interval lands in the township of Farmington, where he resided till 1813.

He was a very respectable citizen, and one of the best farmers in the vicinity.

It was a singular Coincidence that while his father, Amos Cooke, was suffering persecution in the town of Wallingford for his rigid Episcopalian views and his Federal beliefs, that his son Roswell's residence in Farmington was rendered unpleasant and even uncomfortable by the treatment he received from the population of that town.

Roswell Cooke was an extensive reader for a farmer, was in politics a firm Jeffersonian Democrat, and his religious views did not square with those of the Saybrook platform, entertained by the good people of Farmington.

From these circumstances constant bickerings arose, till, in the year 1813, while the war with Great Britain was progressing, they became so unpleasant that he sold his fine farm on the Farmington intervals and removed to Columbus, Ohio.

Here he located on a fine farm between that City and Worthington, in the vicinity of the Scioto River.

... touch a little on pioneer life in the early days of Ohio.

My grandfather, with his family, his sons Chauncey and Rodney, with their young wives, were six weeks coming from their pleasant home in Connecticut, to their future home in Ohio.

At that time there was one log cabin where Columbus now stands. The site of the future city was a slashing;

One great trial they met with was the Pennsylvania wagons with their six horse teams and drivers.

Sometimes it amounted to a skirmish (when they attempted to take the right of way from the "damned Yankee carts," as they termed the two-horse wagons from Connecticut) in which case they always found if the carts were small they carried plenty of muscle, and the muscle carried the day

They had the good fortune to arrive safely at their destination with plenty of strength and energy to carry on their work in the new country.

The founder of the family in Ohio was Roswell Cooke, who was born in Farmington, Connecticut December 6, 1764, and was the third son of Amos and Rhoda (Hasford) Cooke.

At the age of sixteen he enlisted in the Colonial army, and served throughout the remainder of the Revolutionary War.

On the 21st of October 1788, he married Rachel Newell, of Farmington, and in 1800, with his wife and five children, two sons being married at that time, he left his Connecticut home and started for the territory of Ohio by wagons, which carried their worldly possessions.

During the journey, which lasted six weeks, they met with several adventures.

While passing through Pennsylvania, the Dutch teamsters with their big wagons often refused the right of way to the travelers, calling their vehicles "damned Yankee carts" and fights resulted with victory to the Yankees, as is usually the case in any contest.

On their arrival in Columbus that city contained but one log cabin.

Roswell Cooke died in Delaware, Ohio,
December 27, 1827.

Caroline Jennette Cooke, born in Franklin Co, Jan 28, 1827, married Josiah Barber, Civil Engineer of Cleveland, Ohio, Jan 16, 1851.

They spent some years of their married life on the old farm in Franklin Co. Here was born to them, on July 6, 1852, their only child, Kate Cooke Barb~~our~~er, who died here June 6, 1863.

At the close of the war, Mr & Mrs. Barber moved to Cleveland, where in 1884, Mr. Barber died, aged 59 years.

As of July 7, 1897, Mrs. Barber only one of Chauncey Cooke's children still living.

Never was there a family more kind and genial among themselves than this branch of the Cookes.

They were open hearted and hospitable and several of them quite gifted in a musical way, so that the home became the natural gathering place for people all around the country on all sorts of festive occasions

In the autumn of 1810 Chauncey Cooke entered the popular and flourishing academy at Wallingford, then in charge of the Rev. Joshua Bradley. at that time a very pleasant, intelligent and social circle of young people were either in attendance on the academy or were residents of the town.

Sleighrides, balls, and especially cotillion parties, under the direction of Nathan Clark, afterward Colonel in the United States army, frequently engaged the attention of that social circle.

Young Cooke was a popular member of it, and as it often engaged in vocal music, and he was a proficient as a singer, he became our musical leader.

at that day "Jefferson and Liberty," though now forgotten, was then the universal party song of the Jeffersonians.

Politics ran high and it was frequently sang by our young circle. Cooke generally officiated as chorister on such occasions

The country at that time was densely wooded, through which roamed the Indians and wild beasts.

The brothers both erected houses out of round unhewn logs, with puncheon floors and primitive fireplaces, with mud-and-stick chimneys

They lived in true pioneer style while clearing their land and transforming it into productive fields.

At first their field products were light, but the trusty rifle supplied the deficiency, Rodney Cooke being a good marksman.

In course of time the land became highly cultivated, and upon the farms which they developed the brothers spent the remainder of their lives.

They were energetic and enterprising men, and one of the first grist and saw mills in the county was constructed by them on the Olentangy about 1827, now known as the Weisheimer mill.

Amos

Long before the American Revolution, he attached himself to the then small society of Episcopalians. That society were Loyalists or Tories at and during the Revolution. Small in numbers they embraced some of the best families in that town. A most violent and virulent persecution was commenced against them, not milder nor more tolerant than the recent Ku Klux at the South. Many of the best families were compelled to flee with their clergyman, the Rev. Samuel Andrews, to Nova Scotia. Amos Cooke took a prominent position in defense of his religious rights..... Arrests and fines used up all his property and destroyed his business. At the close of the war he was poor but owned a small place on Main street, in Wallingford.

In 1786-7 the constitution of the United States was formed and adapted... He was determined to be on the side of the Government, and accordingly attached himself to the Federal party as an ardent defender of the new Constitution. All of the Episcopalians in that town, as well as many of its best people, took the same position, but all of that numerous rabble that had been such ardent patriots during the revolution now became anti-Federalists or Democrats. Many respectable persons also joined the anti-Federal Party, which constituted a large majority in the town. Politics never ran higher or raged with more virulence.

They eventuated in the election of Mr. Jefferson as president. The great Jeffersonian festival was held here on the 11th of March, 1801.

"Physical causes influence the moral faculty" wrote Dr. Rush. Both physical and mental causes had for a long series of years exerted their full and unfavorable influences on this individual and changed his nature and disposition.

While the whole Cooke family, in all its branches, were distinguished for kindness, affability, and a musical taste, he from 1800 to 1810 was morose, misanthropic and quarrelsome. This life of controversy had obliterated the kind Cooke disposition and substituted a pugilistic one in its place.

His children scattered and left him, and he and his wife, for at least ten years experienced a life of poverty, relieved in part by the contributions of his son Roswell, his Cooke relations, and the members of the Episcopal Church.

His wife died May 10th, 1810.

Soon after Roswell came with a carriage and prepared to take his father to Farmington, where he would be well cared for.

Persuasion made no impression. "No," said he, "I'd rather stay here and read Hudson & Goodwin" (the Federal newspaper) than to go and live with my son Roswell."

Two of the township selectmen thought to hasten a termination of the affair by raising him by force into the carriage. A demonstration on his part soon convinced them that their line of duty lay in some other direction.

He, however, soon after left Wallingford and took up his residence among his children. He died at the house of his youngest son, Lyman Cooke, in Marcellus, N.Y. in the year 1813, age over eighty years.

at the age of nineteen he had completed his common school education, what then embraced reading, spelling, writing and arithmetic, and was engaged in learning the trade of stone mason and working at intervals on a farm.

at this age he was distinguished for his muscular strength and activity. athletic exercises, as wrestling, running, jumping, etc, were the popular amusements of the young men. at these he was universally the victor in all contests. Even as late as the year of his death, 1810, his step was as firm and precise as the best drilled West Point student

In 1758, a requisition was made on the province of Connecticut for a large body of her militia to join the expedition against Canada fitting out under General Abercrombie. Scores of young men, Isaac Cooke among the number were pressed (not drafted), and forthwith joined the army before Ticonderoga. They were placed under the tyrannical instruction of the British drill sergeants, and from necessity became military proficients. He was present at the

This position he held till the commencement of the American revolution, and he brought his company into the highest state of discipline.

He married Martha, daughter of Benjamin Cook March 6th, 1760, and continued to follow his stone mason trade and to carry on farming till the news of the battle of Lexington arrived.

On the receipt of that intelligence he and part of his militia company hastened to Boston. As soon as the Provincial Congress formed a regular army he was commissioned a captain. In that army he continued to serve every day during the protracted contest, and at its disbandonment he was honorably discharged as Colonel.

He was present generally under the immediate command of Washington in several important battles. At the crossing of the Delaware and during the ensuing battles, he and his company occupied a most important position - of the Court of Common Pleas.

In the year 1828, ... he, with Isaac Waek, represented the county of Ross in the same body [House of Representatives of Ohio].
..... The early history of our native town of Wallingford and the biography of his numerous Cooke relatives were the principal topics of our conversations.

In 1792 he married Margaretta Scott.

Marietta, daughter of Isaac Cooke 4th married James Webb, M.D.

A daughter of this marriage is the wife of Rutherford B. Hayes, president of the United States.

Mrs. Hayes descended through four successive generations of Isaac Cookes.

Not one of her relatives by the name of Cooke is now to be found in the town of Wallingford. A few distant collateral relations still exist there.
